

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and method for extracting cells from organs in which a digestion chamber includes at least one inlet and at least one outlet, and a separator for retaining the organ and permitting the cells and the physiologically compatible medium to exit the outlet. The digestion chamber can also include at least one agitation member having an interior with at least one void.

5 An agitation member for extracting cells from organs is also disclosed.